“Laura Green creates paintings that resonate with collectors because they balance strong composition with an authentic sense of place and feeling.” - Patric Stillman, The Studio Door Gallerist

Laura Green is a San Diego-based painter whose vibrant acrylic works explore California wilderness through the lens of motherhood and outdoor adventure. She holds a BA in Fine Arts from UC Santa Cruz, a Post-Baccalaureate in Studio Arts from UC Berkeley Extension (with Distinction), and a Certificate in Art and Creative Process from UCSD Extension.

Green's work has earned recognition in juried exhibitions nationwide, including First Place at Yosemite Renaissance 40 (2025), and inclusion in group exhibits at venues including Oceanside Museum of Art, Turtle Bay Exploration Park, Yellowstone Art Museum, and California Art League. Her public art installations appear throughout Southern California, including a permanent commission for UCI Medical Center, and temporary exhibit projects with the City of Glendale, and multiple San Diego County library branches.

Green is a resident artist at The Studio Door in San Diego's Hillcrest neighborhood and is represented by Cobalt Gallery in South Park. Her work has been featured in the San Diego Union-Tribune and Imperial Beach News. She paints full-time while raising four children who regularly appear as subjects in her landscape compositions.

Artist Statement:

I construct composite acrylic landscapes from California wilderness—impossible geographies where desert meets alpine, coast collides with chaparral. Working from photographs shot while hiking with my children in San Diego County, and further afield such as Joshua Tree, Big Sur, and the High Sierra, I build scenes that exist nowhere except on canvas. These aren't plein air studies but accumulations of fragmented attention: the wilderness you see while preventing falls, negotiating snack breaks, answering endless questions. I layer saturated oranges, dense greens, and violet shadows through aggressive, visible brushwork that mirrors kids' restless energy.

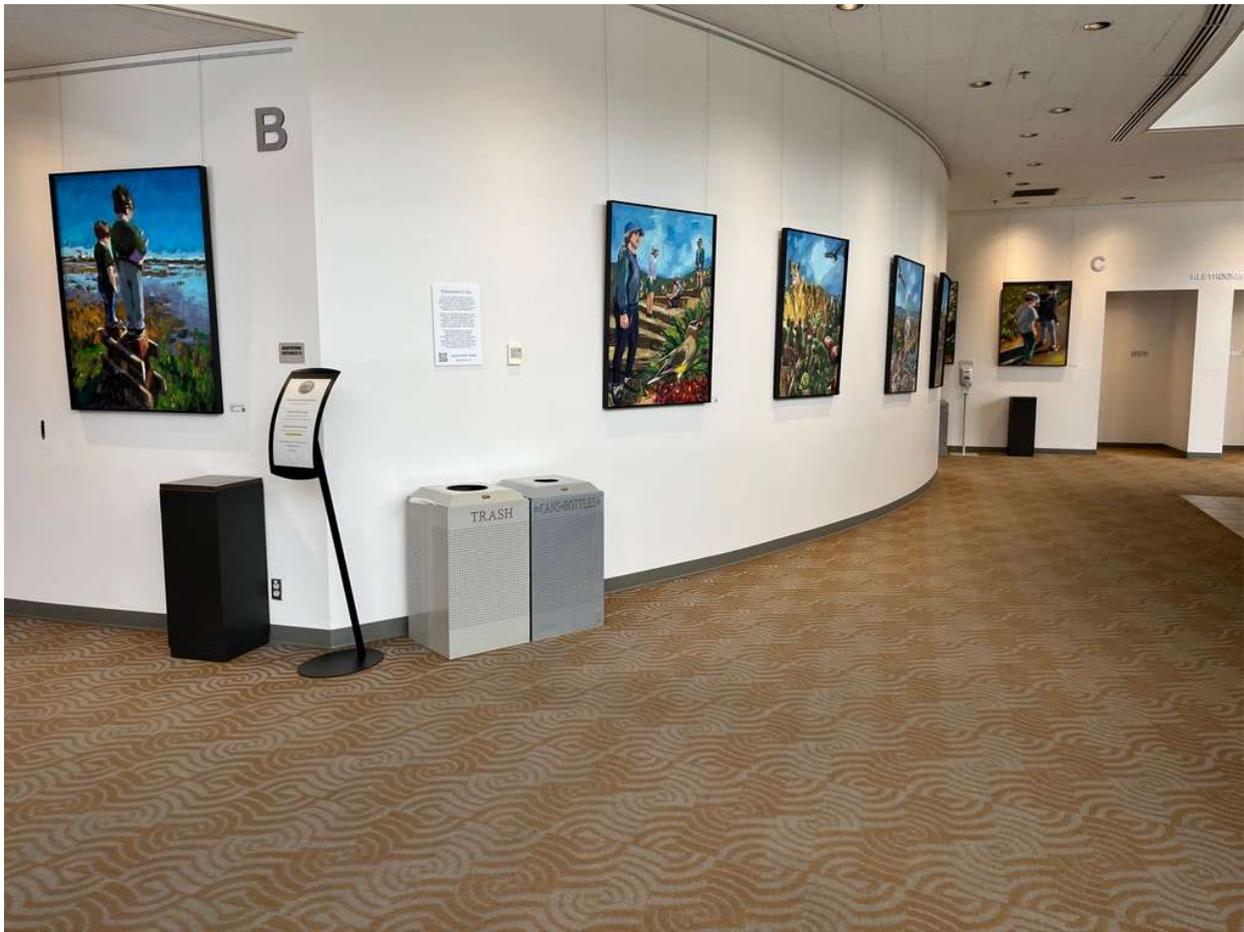

I create work from 11x14” to 48x60 inches, these paintings create the physical presence that matches hiking with children—exhausting, exhilarating, overwhelming. They capture something landscape painting traditionally ignores: the chaotic joy of motherhood conducted outdoors, where maintaining wonder while managing risk becomes its own wild terrain.
