Artist Statement

My work depicts figures of children as active people in the landscape. I am not interested in sentimental art. Instead, I capture the force and dynamism of childhood through their entanglement in nature. While wrestling with traditional expectations of motherhood and a society that rushes through childhood, there is a naturalness to children being fully alive in wild spaces. By stepping away from conventional schooling pressures, such as endless testing and indoor confinement, I reclaim the motherhood lens as one of attentive presence and quiet resistance.

These composite landscapes are drawn from family hikes and road trips across San Diego County, Joshua Tree, Big Sur, and the High Sierra. They are not literal places but layered accumulations of color and time. Bold, visible brushwork conveys the urgency, wonder, fear, and discomfort of introducing children to wild places. Saturated oranges, dense greens, and violet shadows heighten the emotional intensity.

Painted from 11x14" to 48x60", these works invite viewers to experience wilderness as vivid, unpredictable, and alive, which is a mirror for our own inner thresholds. A connection to nature fuels the emotional core of my work that drives me forward in both life and art. Through my art practice, I give my children time outdoors to observe, take risks, and simply exist as complete people in nature. Their sharp observation. exuberance, and restless energy cannot be overlooked.

“Laura Green creates paintings that resonate with collectors because they balance strong composition with an authentic sense of place and feeling.” - Patric Stillman, The Studio Door Gallerist

Laura Green is a San Diego-based painter creating acrylic paintings of the natural world through the lens of motherhood and outdoor family life. Green holds a BA in Fine Art from UC Santa Cruz, a Post-Baccalaureate in Studio Arts from UC Berkeley Extension (with Distinction), and a Certificate in Art and Creative Process from UCSD Extension.

Green's work has earned recognition in juried exhibitions nationwide, including First Place at Yosemite Renaissance 40 (2025), and inclusion in group exhibits at venues including Oceanside Museum of Art, Turtle Bay Exploration Park, Yellowstone Art Museum, and California Art League. Her public art installations appear throughout Southern California, including a permanent commission for UCI Medical Center, a temporary exhibit projects with the City of Glendale, and multiple San Diego County library branches.

Green is a resident artist at The Studio Door in San Diego's Hillcrest neighborhood and is represented by Cobalt Gallery with select works available through Sparks Gallery. Her work has been featured in the San Diego Union-Tribune and Imperial Beach News. She paints full-time while raising four children who regularly appear as active subjects in her compositions.
